What is an Official Community Plan Amendment?

The City's Official Community Plan (OCP) reflects the long-term vision and consolidation of Council's objectives for land use, as well as the form and character of development. The OCP also contains guidelines for Development Permit Areas. The OCP identifies land use designations and types of development that Council considers appropriate throughout the City.

An Official Community Plan Amendment may be initiated to change a land use designation or policy direction specified in the OCP.

What is a Zoning Bylaw Amendment?

The City's Zoning Bylaw No. 0265 identifies zones that apply to specific areas to regulate the use and density of the land and the siting, size, and dimensions of buildings and structures allowed in that area.

Zoning also establishes and promotes minimum standards for health, safety, convenience, and public welfare. Through the use of density parameters, zoning can prevent overcrowding of land and ensure appropriate building forms.

A Zoning Bylaw Amendment, or 'rezoning', is the process of changing the zone of a property. Zoning can only be changed by an amendment to the Zoning Bylaw.

When is an amendment required?

Rezoning is required when the proposed use or density of a property or the proposed building form/siting is not permitted by the existing zone. Rezoning may allow for a change in these regulations. The review process examines the impact of the change on the community to ensure consistency with the community's standard of development.

Where a proposed Zoning Bylaw Amendment is not consistent with the OCP, an OCP Amendment is also required. In such cases, an OCP Amendment must be made before a change to the zoning can occur, although OCP and Zoning Amendments typically occur concurrently.
